Jangsa Animal Saving Trust engages in the buddhist practice of Tsethar- 'Saving of animal lives.' However, over the years its activities has increased exponentially and is now actively involved in all fields of animal welfare-rescuing injured and sick animals, providing medical intervention and care, awareness and advocacy and maintaining animal sanctuaries across the country.

In doing so, Jangsa envisions in having as many people on board as volunteers and engage in activities that directly benefit animals as well as enhance an inclusive and a compassionate society.

Volunteers can help to take forward myriad activities of Jangsa. It is our collective action that will mould our future destiny.

Volunteers will be called upon to assist in activities of Jangsa as and when the need arises.

Jangsa envisions and aspires that this relative love for animals cultivates the fertile ground that nurtures the realization of the ultimate aim of Bodhicitta - that is the grand union of wisdom and compassion.
